MOOD: 😊 amused

MUSIC: Matt Nathanson - Gone

Matt Nathanson apparently has some sort of a congenital condition wherein he is incapable of writing a song that does not contain either the word "hips," a reference to falling and not being caught, and/or nakedness. (For extra credit, use all three.)

Wabbit, we miss you. Come home. All is forgiven.

Forgiveness veeeeery thin on the ground, mon. But we're coming home anyway. And I owe the the Cowboy tickets for real good seats to the professional sporting event of his choice.

...this sounds like it has the makings of a good story.

I buy dinner tonight if you spill. Maybe we can get  trollcatz and the missus to come with.

I assume this means no traction there either?

Teflon all the way down. And the Cowboy planted his mighty Tony Lamas and agreed with me. I threatened to send an anonymous note to the GAO about irresponsible distribution of employee time.

Dude.

I mean, if Dad is right? It's huge. And I understand why he's hot for it.

But it's like the sharks in the Roald Dahl book. The peach is too big to get our teeth into. I can't even figure out what's potential case and what's not. And if I can't pick 'em out and you can't pick 'em out...

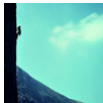

...maybe there's nothing to pick out.

You might not be wrong.

And if you are...

it'll be there when we come back.

 trollcatz and the missus will be pleased to join you. Churrascaria?

Yanno? Cowboy?

He's like deceptively a'ite. Once you get past the lantern jaw and the glower and Dallas accent and the shoulders six feet wide and the pretty young things on a string.

Kind of like Pauley. When I'm coming over solipsistic, I pretend he exists to remind me that not everybody from the flyover states hates me and thee for breathing, or thinks we're scary space aliens.

Also, FedEx cargo loader? You can't hide the smell of BBQ. That's just mean.

Re N. Dakota: I always know whether I'm in a dairy state or a beef state by checking what they put out for coffee creamer on the tables at the greasy spoons. (Oooh, yum! Powdered coffee bleach!)

I dunno, they expect you to eat a lot of food, it's the south after all. grin

As far as food by mail, I was out and about once, and the inlaws tried to surprise me by sending 4lbs of smoked salmon from Alaska. Oddly enough, that shipment never made it past customs. . . .
